Current Status and Issues Surrounding Relationship Banking in Japan

January 18, 2008 Yasushi Hasegawa, Director, Banks Division II, Supervisory Bureau, FSA, Japan

Background to Relationship Banking (Part 1)

- Financial Revitalization Program established October 2002
 - •At the time this was vital in bringing the NPL problem under control.
 - •Major banks: the objective was to reduce the NPL ratio (8.4% per year ending in March 2002) by half within a three-year period.
 - → It was necessary to promote the removal of NPL from balance sheets (selling or amortizing = separation from debtors)
 - Regional financial institutions: Considered separately, based on relationship banking, their difference from the major banks (difficulty in separate these from debtors = regional economy).

Background to Relationship Banking (Part 2)

- Report by the Second Subcommittee of the Financial System Council in March 2003
 - It is correct to resolve the NPL problem of regional financial institutions by promoting all types of efforts to revitalize SMEs and stimulate regional economies.

 \rightarrow Strengthening of relationship banking functions during the Intensive Improvement period (2003 - 2005)

- FY 2003 2005: The First Action Program
- FY 2005 2007: The Second Action Program

Main Item of Action Program

- 1. Business revitalization and facilitating financing of SMEs
 - Support for business creation and start-ups
 - Strengthening of management consulting and support for client companies
 - Business revitalization of client companies
 - Financing that does not rely excessively on real estate collateral and individual guarantees, etc.
- 2. Strengthening of management
 - Strengthening of risk management, etc.
- 3. Improving convenience for regional users
 Regional contribution, broad revitalization, etc.

NPL Ratio Trends by Business Category

*Figures are based on claims disclosed under the Financial Revitalization Law.

*Figures for credit unions and credit associations include central financial institutions (Shinkin Central Bank, the Shinkumi Federation Bank)

Examples of Specific Efforts (Part 1)

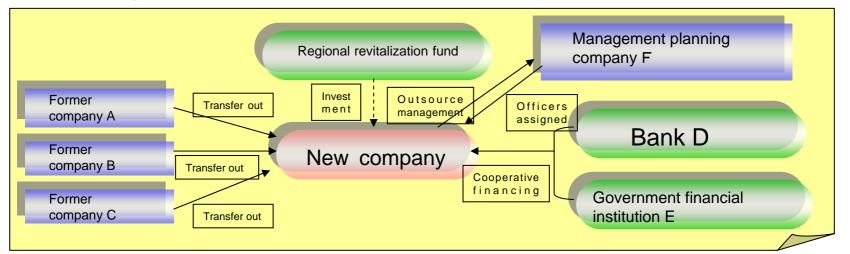

(1) Business revitalization effort: Revitalizing a hot spring resort town (Higashiyama Hot Spring, Fukushima prefecture)

© "Broad" rather than "Point" revitalization

Reorganize of three inns in poor business condition by transferring assets and employees into one new company for management as a single entity

- > Consolidation and improvement of management by merging multiple inns
- Implementation of radical management improvement by inviting inn management professionals
- Special liquidation upon receiving transfer fee payment from the three inns. Related financial institutions cut credit.
- Provision of financing by banks as shown here

Invest through a regional revitalization fund set up in conjunction with (1) cooperative financing and (2) investment companies

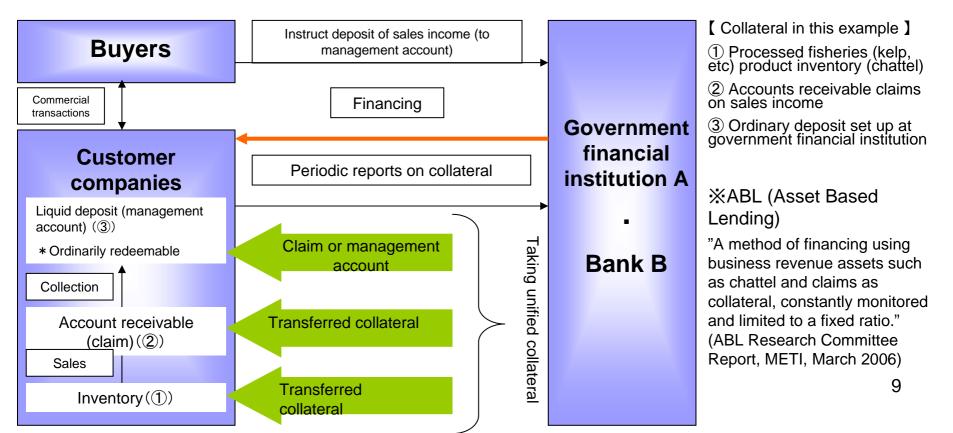

Examples of Specific Efforts (Part 2)

(2) Financing that is not excessively dependent on collateral or guarantees:

Product inventory as collateral (Fukuoka Prefecture)

«Syndicated loan ABL using chattel registration system (first in Japan)»

- Monitoring of business life cycle, use of inventory, accounts receivable, and liquid deposits as collateral (financing by combined collateral with chattel)
- $\ensuremath{\textcircled{O}}$ Establishment of fixed maximum financing framework
- $\ensuremath{\textcircled{O}}$ Exercising of governance from the viewpoint of borrowers through correct covenants

(From the report by the Second Subcommittee of the Financial System Council in April 2007)

- 1. Awareness of current status
- 2. Fundamental way of thinking
- 3. (1) Future concrete efforts
 - (2) Promotional structure

(From the report by the Second Subcommittee of the Financial System Council in April 2007)

- 1. Awareness of current status
 - Results are improving steadily in terms of the number of cases and amounts.

The NPL ratio is also declining.

- However, efforts by financial institutions are showing signs of polarizing.
- ① Business revitalization, ② financing that is not excessively dependent on real estate collateral and individual guarantees (ability to clearly judge business value), and ③ regional contribution (broad revitalization) are still insufficient.
- There have been many across-the-board efforts, but "selection and concentration" remains insufficient.
- Increasing profitability is an issue as competition in regional finance gets tougher.

(From the report by the Second Subcommittee of the Financial System Council in April 2007)

- 2. Fundamental way of thinking
 - In view of the stiffening competition in regional finance, the relationship banking business model (financial services with high added value) is vital in order to increase the profitability of regional financial institutions.
 - For that purpose, thorough "selection and concentration" is essential for all regional financial institutions, while understanding the needs of regional customers.
 - Sustainable efforts towards regional contribution and broad revitalization that are related to financial institutions' own profits are also important (win-win relationships).

(From the report by the Second Subcommittee of the Financial System Council in April 2007)

3. (1) Future concrete efforts

In future, each financial institution will be charged with developing its own concrete measures that emphasize the following three points pertaining to the nature of relationship banking:

- Strengthening support for client companies that correspond to company life cycles (establishment, business revitalization, etc.)
- ② Development of full complement of financing measures that are appropriate for small companies, such as financing methods based on an understanding of business value
- ③ Contribution to sustainable regional economies

(From the report by the Second Subcommittee of the Financial System Council in April 2007)

- 3. (2) Structure of promotion
 - This is not to be a temporary program, but rather a permanent measure for supervisory guidelines.
 - It does not require uniform or overall planning and reporting, but rather requires follow ups within ordinary supervision
 - Each financial institution will release its own results and examples of its efforts.

 \rightarrow The FSA will consider introducing or honoring examples of advanced efforts and other initiatives worthy of recognition.
